FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What is an Independent School?

Independent schools are private elementary and secondary schools which are governed by an independent board of trustees. Free of outside control and funding, they are able to set their own standards and mission, and to serve particular families and children. Some work with the academically or artistically gifted, others with average to above-average children, others with learning-disabled or those with unsatisfactory previous school experiences. Many offer boarding as well as day programs.

All focus on the needs of the individual child, within a range of curricula from traditional to progressive. Every AISNE member school is accredited by a nationally recognized process which assures quality and accountability. One of the schools in our Directory may be the right choice for your family.

What Can an Independent School Offer?

Independent schools focus on strong academic programs and character development in a secure, attentive environment. Their teachers are outstanding; many have earned advanced degrees. Independent schools are generally smaller than other schools, allowing them to offer individual attention, a sense of community, and the chance for each student to excel. They place special emphasis on extracurricular programs, including visual and performing arts, athletics, student guidance, leadership programs, college counseling, and community service.

Among independent schools, families can find everything from a classical curriculum including the study of Latin and Greek to innovative methods of team teaching, collaborative learning, and technology-based education. Today's independent schools seek a diverse student body, and most offer financial aid to help enable families of all income levels to attend.

How and When Do We Apply?

Families apply to a school after receiving materials from its office of admission and visiting the campus. The application process may require testing, observation of younger children, transcripts and written statements from older children, letters of recommendation, and in the case of those seeking financial aid, a completed statement of need. The most important step in the process for schools is to learn about the child, so that the right match can be made.

Most schools begin accepting applications for the next school year in the fall, and ask that families complete the application process by mid-January or early February. Candidates are notified in early March. Other schools may have later application opportunities, but in all cases, early application is advisable, particularly for those seeking financial aid.

What services does AISNE offer to families?

AISNE's Web Directory of Independent Schools lists over 175 independent schools. Families can search by school name, state, city, grade level, school type, and even zipcode. Go to "Find a School" www.aisne.org. The "Find a School" section also features a chronological, searchable listing of school open houses. In the spring and summer of each year AISNE maintains a list of schools that have openings in different grades. To access this information call us at AISNE, 781-843-8440. During the course of the year AISNE sponsors school fairs, opportunities for families to meet with a variety of schools under one roof.

What other resources may be helpful to families?

The web site of the National Association of Independent Schools (NAIS) has a variety of information that will be helpful to families and prospective students. Go to www.nais.org

How do we get started finding the right school for the student in our family?
